

I have enjoyed the legislation passed by the Indiana government involving Telephone Privacy. I can't explain how comforting it is to receive calls from people you most want to talk with - family & friends - without the unneeded or unwanted hassle of interruptions from unsolicited calls. I am very active & very able to contact people or business when I want or need their services. With the availability of the internet, I can find out offers & information online without having to have someone call me to let me know of their business. It is far unnecessary in this era of technology to require such dependence on businesses to call us on the telephone to offer their services. This is nothing different than the millions of spam emails I receive for products that I don't want or need. For us consumers, there is a medium available that we can preview at our own pace should we have a need for such products. No one wants or needs someone to push ideas upon us when not asked for, we are all capable on our own.
